THIS is Mrs. James Murphy of Enniscorthy, Co. Wexford, who claims her life was saved by a little mud, some water, and a lot of faith.

Two years ago Mrs. Murphy, weighing less than five stones, made final arrangements to put her affairs in order.

"I have cancer of the bowels and will live no longer than six weeks," she told her family. "My dying wish is to spend my last days at home rather than in a hospital bed."

Yet within 24 hours of visiting a faith healer, Mrs. Murphy was on the road to recovery and has not looked back since.

She is one of thousands of Irish people who believe faith healers can cure where doctors cannot.

Reporter JOHN KEANE has been investigating the men who are to some heartless tricksters, and to others a blessing from God.

Read THE FAITH HEALERS, an amazing new series which starts today on page 8 and 9.
